REASONS

HUMBLY OFFERED

To prove that the Letter printed at the End of the French Memorial of Justification is a French Forgery, and falsely ascribed to his R—— H———s.

IT has been observed by the Great Grotius in his Treatise De Bello & de Pace, that a War breaking out between two Nations, does in a great Measure dissolve all those Duties, which, as Beings of the same Species, we owe to one another.

THIS then, though it may greatly serve to palliate the Behaviour of the French Ministry, in alledging a Thousand Particulars, which are not strictly true, in Justification of their Uprightness and pacifick Intentions before the Declaration of War; yet as Christians, united under one Head of Religion, though various in the Manner of practising it, I conceive private Characters ought not to be sarcastically treated, nor the Glory of the most respectable Princes be contaminated by a horrid Kind of Forgery, with Design to render them contemptible amongst the People with whom they live, and amongst those who are at War with them; such atrocious Proceedings, even Hostilities cannot countenance amongst polite Nations.

are

THAT the French Ministry have been egregiously guilty of this mean and unjustifiable Behaviour, will evidently appear, at least I shall presume to make it so, to any Man who with the least Attention will read what shall be hereafter said on that Letter, which has been printed in the Publick Advertiser, translated from the French Memorial of Justification of their Conduct in the present War, and falsely ascribed to his _____ the D____; I say falsely, because, I humbly conceive that no Man can believe him the Dictator of a Letter the like of that, when the Reasons which I shall offer will be laid before him; and here I must observe, that though the innate Greatness of Mind in the august Bosom of him to whom it is imputed, will not permit him to undertake the proving this French Assertion to be a Falſity, conſiding that his known Character of vaſt Underſtanding and military Skill amongst his Countrymen, is above all Danger of being attainted by French Machinations; yet I hope I ſhall ſtand diſculpate in the Opinions of my Countrymen, in my Endeavours to explode the atrocious and malignant Deſigns of the Gallie Miniſtry; particularly as it is the Fate of ſuperior Merit to be the moſt ſeverely attacked in this Country, and as the Slander of many Tongues, Enemies to the ſuppoſed R— Dictator, hath been let looſe againſt his military Knowledge on this Occaſion: Theſe I mean to ſilence.

SUCH a ſcandalous Attempt as this ought to make a French Miniſter, or even a French Monarch, bluſh with Confuſion in the Dark, when he reflects on the Indignity of his Behaviour; nor ſhould I wonder, if, touched with Remorſe for this atrocious Attempt, he ſhould abdicate his Throne, particularly as it is reported his Mind is much turned to Devotion; but alas! such is the despicable and perfidious Nature of the French, him whom they despair to conquer by Arms, exalted as he now stands in the Judgment of all Europe, and particularly their own Army, they mean to traduce and lessen in the universal Opinion, before they presume to oppose him with open Force.

In order to the obtaining this End, they have taken an Occasion on Mr B——'s Defeat in America, to forge a Letter as if dictated by his ————, and found amongst that General's Papers; by this Publication they mean artfully to insinuate, that the supposed R—— Dictator had by his Orders first commenced Hostilities; and what they wish much more, to sow a Belief amongst their own Army, that there can be no reasonable Dread of any General's Arms, who is capable of dictating such frivolous Commands; and to ours, that there can be no well-grounded Reason for Expectation of Success, in a Capacity so little adapted to military Knowledge, as such a Letter must proclaim the Author to possess.

By this Artifice, they cunningly devised to diminish the Fears and Palpitations which have long seized the French Troops at the Name of C———, and to annihilate the sanguine Hopes of Victory, which have always animated our Troops under his Command, and render them less to be dreaded in the Hour of Battle, by the fallen Opinion of their Leader.

WITHOUT effecting these two Conditions in the Minds of our and their Soldiers, the French Ministers foresaw that every Attempt to an Invasion, would terminate in the Glory of England, and Disgrace of France; for these Reasons it is probable, they have so long delayed to invade this Island, 'till they could find some Occasion to inspirit their Soldiers and deject ours, and which they imagine they have at last attained to by this Forgery; suspecting, that as no positive Proof can be brought of it's not being found in B——k's Papers, that therefore it will pass upon the World as a Reality, and produce the pernicious Effects which they wish,

See line 3. above

As

As it is therefore impossible to ascertain to what Degree the Genuineness of this Letter may gain Credit, and how far the supposed ✓ R—— Dictator's Character may succumb under this malignant Device, by the farther Artifices of his Enemies and their Adherents;
 ✓ as a Briton, I shall just take upon me to explode the Falshood and radically erase the Effects of it; and as I have been the frequent Spectator of the great military Skill and Actions of the supposed R—— Dictator, to ✓ prove how it is impossible he can have dictated this Epistle; and in this Place nothing were so easy as to prove demonstratively by Arguments à priori, that the supposed R—— Dictator could not be the Author of such absurd Directions, by saying, just as we do in Theology a good God cannot give immoral ✓ Institutes, that a great General cannot give ridiculous Orders.

THIS Argument, however, as it may be thought too abstract and metaphysical for the Multitude, I shall just wave and prove it à posteriori, that the Assertion of the French is an Impossibility, from the Contents and Nature of the Epistle.

Now

Now let me just premise and enumerate all the excellent Qualities of a General, which are known to reside in the supposed Dictator of this Epistle to Mr B——k, to all which Facts I can easily call abundant Testimony, and of which I have been frequently an Eye-witness.

FIRST, no General so judiciously distinguishes what Men ought to be chosen for every kind of Enterprize, either those who are to command or those who are to obey.

SECONDLY, no Commander has ever been more intelligent, explicit, and just in his Orders to all those whom he has appointed to command.

THIRDLY, no Man is more acquainted with the Geography, Nature of the Place, and Nature of the Enemy, against whom he sends an Army, or plans an Expedition, by what Methods Success ought to be pursued, or is most easily obtained.

FOURTHLY, no General is so well skilled in all the Precautions which are necessary to

to prevent a Surprize, or the spreading a Panic amongst an Army.

FIFTHLY, no General so truly understands the Methods of regularly supplying an Army with necessary Provisions, or how it may be transported from one Part to another with the greatest Facility to the Soldiers.

SIXTHLY, no Commander has ever equalled him in destining Troops to the Duties for which they are adapted, from the rawest Militia and Irregulars to the best disciplined and veteran Forces.

ALL these Qualifications being acknowledged by Nature and Study to be inherent in his ———, and Orders repugnant to them in the Letter ; it is easy to prove syllogistically that he cannot be the Author of it, in the following Manner :

Major. No great General can be the Author of ridiculous Orders.

Minor. The supposed R——l Dictator is the greatest General in the World.

Conclusion.

Conclusion. Therefore the R——l Dictator is not the Author of those Orders.

HOWEVER, waving this Proof, I shall now proceed by the Arguments à posteriori, when analysing every particular Paragraph of the Letter, as printed in the Advertiser, I shall just show, that in every Sentence there are to be found Contradictions to all the above Qualifications of great military Skill; and thence fairly inferring it impossible, that the Letter there printed can be from the R——l Dictator, boldly pronounce the whole a perfidious, insidious, base, and degenerate French Forgery.

THE first thing I shall remark, is that sly ironical Sneer with which the Letter is introduced, and the Reason for printing it.

“ Hague, June 21. The following Letter “ wrote by C——l N——r to General
“ B——k, and published by the French
“ Court, is very remarkable, if considered “ only as a Proof of the excellent military “ Skill of the P——e by whom it was dicta“ ted.” This then is the Key to their In-C tent

tent, in all the following Particulars, which I shall now proceed to analyse.

THE first Paragraph is as follows:

“ His R——l-H———s the ——, in “ the several Audiences he has given you, “ entered into a particular Explanation of “ every Part of the Service you are about to “ be employed in; and as a better Rule for “ the Execution of His M——y’s Instruc“ tions, he last Saturday communicated to “ you his own Ideas concerning this Affair,
 “ and since you were desirous of forgetting no “ Part thereof, he has ordered me to deliver “ them to you in writing.”

FROM this Paragraph, it is impossible not to perceive the French Design to be just as I have before represented it, and that as good Sense is always known to be the Basis of right Commands, they have began by introducing those in this Letter with the rankest Absurdity and Nonsense, to give a more genuine Air of Truth to the following Dictates, as proceeding from a Man of no Understanding. Sapping the Foundation soon brings down the Building.

THIS

THIS very Passage, however, is sufficient to destroy the Credit of the whole Design, and to prove it the basest Forgery: Can it be imagined by the most malignant, that a P——e so exalted in military Capacity, so celebrated through all Europe, could have dictated such Expressions? That having entered into a particular Explanation of every Part of the Service, he was now communicating a better Rule. What? a better Rule than every Particular which can be said upon the Subject, every particular including every thing? Is it to be believed the supposed R——l Dictator does not know that all the Parts include the whole? Is it possible then, that his Lips could have pronounced, make something more than all, or increase the whole; is not such a Direction as absurd as the Irishman's, who bad his Servant buy Things for nothing at all, and sell them for twice as much? And here indeed, there seems to be some malignant Squint towards the Person, whom the French have forged for the Writer as well as the Dictator, that Gentleman, if I am rightly informed, being an Native of Ireland.

LET us suppose however, without adhering to the strict Sense of the Words, that they mean only that the supposed R——l Dictator reserved his best Advice 'till the last: What is this but insinuating that he kept his best Admonition, as Boys do their best Nuts, to be cracked after the worst were eaten? With what intent could all the former Conversations have been entered into, but to puzzle if the last was to supersede all the rest?

HOWEVER, that no Man may have it in his Power, by saying that every Meaning of these Words being not entered into, that therefore, the Absurdity does not appear too gross to proceed from the supposed great Dictator; I shall confess that there is yet another Sense, which they may possibly convey, I say possibly only, which is, that the former Instructions being His M——y's, the last only were those of the supposed R——l Dictator.

THIS again, upon the slightest Consideration, must prove equally impossible also: Can it be conceived, that so consummate a General would add Impiety to Ignorance, contrary to the avowed Maxim, that K——g's can do no Wrong;

Wrong ; and to that Duty which he owes to that August Personage who first trained his Steps to War ? Can it be imagined by the most inimical Heart, except that of a Frenchman, that a possible Deficiency could have taken place in the great Sire's Instructions, or the Son have insinuated that he knew more than his magnanimous Father ? It is the distinguishing Characteristick of Merit in this illustrious Pupil, to acknowledge his great Progenitor as much superior to him in all military Knowledge, as it was of Marshal Saxe and the French Generals last War, to acknowledge themselves inferior to him.

THERE is yet another Reason, which may be brought something to favour the Expression of keeping the best Instructions 'till last ; that the previous Conversations were only entered upon to enquire into and sift the Capacity of Mr B——k, and be ascertained how well he was adapted for the Service he was sent upon.

THE Event of these Conversations proves the contrary of this being the Intent ; because, had that been the Design, the great intuitive Capacity of the supposed R——l Dictator would

would instantly have discovered, what was proved in the End, that he was unequal to the Enterprize; besides, it is impossible he could have been thought on by this supposed R——l General, to command an Army in Chief; he knew the Man had never seen Siege or Battle, was hot, impetuous, and incircumspect; wherefore he never could have entered into Conversation to discover the true Disposition and Turn of Mind of an Officer, whose Abilities he must be perfectly well acquainted with, and know to be unequal to the Undertaking.

Is it then within the reach of the human Belief, that the Person, who is said to be the R——l Dictator of those Orders, can in one Paragraph have been guilty of such egregious Mistakes, as to say, that he would add something to the whole, and give Advice which was better than all that had been said, when he had already given the whole that could be said; added to this, the Impiety of knowing more than his Sire who knows every thing, and the long Conversations of finding out a Man's Capacity whom he knew perfectly well before.

SHAMEFUL

SHAMEFUL Behaviour for the Ministers of a crowned Head, even in Times of War, base Envy of exalted Talents, which even by this Attempt to efface, ye confess superior, and must terminate in your Dishonour, and his Glory. To preface the following absurd Directions, by insinuating Nonsense, want of Duty, and want of Penetration in one Paragraph against so august a Person; is not this sufficient to prove, beyond all possible Contradiction, that those Words never fell from his Lips, and that the whole is one French Forgery of the blackest Dye, designed with the most malicious Views to calumniate him.

I SHALL now proceed to analyse the following Paragraphs, which will evidently illustrate the last Truth and the Malignancy which it contains; lest the World should still insist that the greatest Genius may sometimes fall into Errors, and that one absurd Paragraph is not sufficient to prove it a Forgery.

“ HIS R——— H———s has this Service very much at Heart, as it is of the highest Importance to His M——y’s American Dominions, and to the Honour of “ his

“ his Troops employed in those Parts ; his “ R——l H———s takes likewise a “ particular Interest in it, as it concerns you “ whom he recommended to His M——y
 “ to be nominated to the chief Command.”

AND here I cannot help remarking, what will be more amply proved in examining the succeeding Paragraphs, that this Letter was written after the Death of Mr B——k, consequently never found with his Papers after the Defeat, and is absolutely founded on the Circumstances of the Battle, and Conduct of the M——y.

WHAT are the Words importance to His Majesty's American Dominions, but an ironical and ludicrous Sarcasm on the Insufficiency of the Force which was sent, and that of the General who conducted them, slyly intimating the m——l Neglect, which has all along appeared since the Commencement of Hostilities, with Respect to these Parts. And why was the Honour of the Troops inserted, but to throw a Sneer on the Behaviour of that Day in Soldiers and General, to call before the Eyes of all Europe, the fallen Reputation of our Army, and the wretched Situation of our

our Colonies; at the same time closing the whole in a Sarcastm on the supposed great Dictator, with his taking a particular Interest in it, as if he was the Recommender of the General, by this meanly attempting to throw the whole Culpability on the supposed R——l G——l: by the Word Interest, sneeringly intimating the Neglect; and by recommending the General, the Miscarriage of the Affair; as if the supposed R——l Person had not Understanding sufficient to know the Importance of America to these Realms, what Troops were sufficient for it's Defence, or Discernment to chuse the General; and consequently, as the Roman Emperors triumphed for the Victories of their Generals, because they had made a right Choice of their Commanders, that therefore the supposed R——l Dictator must fall into Contempt, because he had selected an improper Leader on this Occasion.

SHOULD this obtain Credit, it may perhaps be said, by some Enemy to this great Man, that C——e at Pres—n Pans, H——ly at F——k, and St C——r at Port l'O——t, were all equally of his Choice, and that their ill Success was in like Manner imputable to his Deficiency of Discernment in what G—ls are fit for command.

Now as this is diametrically opposite to the first Article of consummate Generalship, already acknowledged to reside in the supposed R——l Dictator, and is therefore proved impossible to proceed from his Lips; so it is in like Manner equally demonstrated to be impossible, by Experiment, in the exquisite Skill and Knowledge of Mankind, which he manifests in selecting his Favourites; Men of riper Years, profound Sagacity, great Parts, military Knowledge, and close Application to the Study of martial Affairs; neither Horse-Racers, Flatterers, Gamesters, Boasters, or Simpletons, can find Access to him; B——k then could never have been of his Choice. Would Alexander the Great have selected so improper a Man for a military Command? How then can it be conceived, that a greater than he can have committed such an Indiscretion.

ARTFUL as this Malice of the French Ministers may be considered, in suggesting to the World, that he who selects an improper and inferior Man, is equally deficient and culpable with the Person who is chosen:
The

The Malignity ends not there. The next Paragraph is intended to confirm that Suggestion, by intimating, that the Plan of the Expedition was totally absurd, and of the supposed great Dictator's Design ; therefore that he was more deficient in military Knowledge than the Person chosen to put it into Action, and more answerable for the Miscarriage. But let me transcribe the Paragraph.

“ HIS R——— H———'s Opinion is,
 “ that immediately after your landing, you “ consider what Artillery and other Imple“ ments of War it will be necessary to trans“ port to Willis-Creek for your first Operation “ on the Ohio, that it may not fail you in “ the Service ; and that you form a second “ Field-Train, with good Officers and Sol“ diers, which shall be sent to Albany, and “ be ready to march for the second Operation “ at Niagara ; you are to take under your “ Command as many as you think necessary,
 “ of the two Companies of Artillery that are “ in Nova-Scotia and Newfoundland, as soon “ as the Season will allow, taking Care to “ leave enough to defend the Island.”

THIS Paragraph seems levelled against the Excellencies of the second and third Articles of complete Generalship, acknowledged in the supposed R——l Dictator, as well as against the first; and insinuates, that he who gave and he who received these Orders were a Pair of Children, still to preserve the Idea of insufficient Judgement in the falsely supposed Recommender of this General; as if it were possible for the supposed august Dictator to have chosen a Man, to whom he could think of giving Charge to consider what was necessary for a military Enterprize; or that the General could stand in Need of it, or set forward on an Expedition without Artillery and military Implements; it is not more absurd to imagine, that the same Man should want Admonition to stand out of the Rain, not to ride a Journey without his Horse, or to put on his Boots for that Purpose.

THE following Parts are designed to ridicule the Parade of dragging a Train of Artillery through endless pathless Woods, where every Advance must be made by the Dint of Axes to cut Roads through the Forests, and all this to take a little Fort of no Consequence, had

had the Expedition been rightly planned ; after all, taking Care it does not fail you in the Service : What a sarcastic Sneer is this on the Artillery never being once fired during the Attack from the French and Indians, and the falling into the Enemy's Hands ; unmannerly Triumph, insolent Exultation, as if the supposed R——l Dictator did not know that the Forests of America were unlike the Plains of Flanders, and therefore that Cannon were improper Implements to be dragged through pathless Woods, subjecting the Soldier to endless and ineffectual Toil.

THIS Infination, base as it is, is infinitely short of the remaining Part of this Paragraph ; which, by first ordering B——k to attack du Quesne, and then Niagara, would alledge that the supposed R——l Dictator was the Planner of the last Campaign in America. Would a Man of complete Knowledge in the Art of War ever risque an Army through endless Fatigue and Danger, to effect nothing ? Did Hannibal, Scipio, Cyrus, Alexander, Epa-minondas, Turenne, Marlborough, Edward the Black Prince, or Harry V. or any other Hero, ancient or modern, ever order so silly a Thing ? Can a Man then, in whom the superior Qualities lities of all these unite, have committed such a Mistake? The Thing scarce deserves an Answer, yet I am resolved to give it one, and make these French Scoundrels blush to the Bone, and those who would give Credit to it, for this mean Infination.

WHOEVER will take the Pains to look into the Map of America, find where Fort du Quesne is situated, and ask from what Quarter, Supplies and Men are brought to that Fort, will be convinced instantly that all these must come from Quebec in Canada, mounting the River St Lawrence, passing through the Lakes Ontario and Erie, almost a thousand Miles in Distance, and that those Supplies have no other way of being transported to du Quesne, at the same time that Niagara lies between Quebec and du Quesne, thro' which they must of necessity pass: Would any Man who must know this have made du Quesne the first Object of a military Operation, and risked the Ruin of an Army by Marches, Ambuscades, and Sickness, for compleating what the taking of Niagara would as effectually have accomplished without it. This last Fort being taken, would have debarred all possible Succours from du Quesne, and reduced

it in three Months by a Force insuperable, Famine. To conquer this first, and then Niagara, is like the Blunder of a Surgeon who made two Operations instead of one, first cutting off the fore Foot of that very fore Leg which he amputated two Minutes after.

THIS then is equal to saying, the supposed great Dictator did not understand the Geography of those very Parts to which he was sending a General and Army, the Nature of the Enemy's Supplies, the Manner in which two Places ought to be attacked, when one is absolutely dependent on the other, and mistaking the wrong End for the right: Is this possible, ye Frog-roasting Rascals! ye Soup-meagre Thieves! ye Popish Dogs! you shall meet your Reward for this Insolence. Excuse my Passion on this Occasion, my Countrymen! Again, the Sneer on B——k's Weakness to want, and the supposed great Recommender to give, Directions, not to take all the Companies of Artillery from Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, as if such Things could possibly be imagined by a General, but taking Care to leave enough to defend the Island; by this, intimating, either the same Ignorance in Geography, that Nova Scotia and Newfoundland made

made one Island, or that Nova Scotia, the best Object, was the least worth looking after; not to mention the Laugh on S——ly's Expedition to Niagara, and keeping a second good Train and good Officers for that Expedition; when it has been proved by the Event, that not a Cannon has been fired against Niagara, or a military Man sent out second in Command to B——k, who was fit for it; so that on his Death the Command in chief fell upon an old Attorney.

THE next Paragraph is still equally surprising and extraordinary, and seems designed to destroy the third Article of military Excellence.

“ WHEN S——ly's and P——l's Regiments are near compleat, his R——l “ H———s thinks you should cause them “ to encamp, not only that they may be the “ speedier disciplined, but also to draw the “ Attention of the French, and keep them in “ Suspence about the Place you really design
 “ to attack.”

HERE these French Slanderers have artfully insinuated one good Reason for this Order,

Order, to give an Air of Probability to the second, which is ludicrous.

THE encamping, to be sooner disciplined, has some Grounds for the Command; but their being drawn together to conceal the Intent, is of all others the most ridiculous in that Country, and therefore the least possible to have been ordered. In Flanders, where Towns are almost as thick as Trees in America, a Design may easily be disguised, or what City shall be next attacked, where Numbers may not be more than one Day's March from the Encampment; but in America, the Troops being kept in one Camp, would by the Proximity of the next Fort, where the Distances from each other are immense, and but one Road to each, rather decide the Intent than disguise it; more especially, as but two Forts can be the reasonable Objects of their first Attack, Niagara and Crown-Point.

THIS then was designed to throw a Ridicule upon the third Article of military Excellence, and insinuate want of Genius in military Affairs, where all Things are conducted by Similitude and Parallellarity; as if, because an Army encamped in Flanders, may disguise it's Design of attacking any particular Fortrefs, from the Multitude of Towns which are in that Country; that therefore an Army encamped in America, can disguise it's Design of what Town to attempt, where there are scarce any at all; or that, because as numerous Towns require great Attention and Knowledge in the General of the Enemy, in the Distribution and Number of the Garrisons, which to make strong and which to leave weak, from the Incertainty of a sudden Attack; that therefore the French Troops in America would weaken one Fortrefs to strengthen another, when there were Forces enough for both, and only two to be defended. No Satire cuts so keen as the Imputation of such Orders, which, though applicable and right in one Place, are false and absurd in another; it destroys all the Merit of original thinking in a General, by it's being the Mimickry of military Knowledge, and trite Observation on the Conduct in populous Countries, inapplicable in those which are not so. At the same time this Order carries a farther Sting on S——ly's Delay at Albany, which gave the French at Niagara the Opportunity of making that Place impossible to be attacked that Campaign.

paign. Are the Orders in this Paragraph, the Dictates of that supposed august Commander?

THE following Paragraph being so singular in it's Kind, verging so vehemently to the ludicrous, and so palpably designed to destroy all Belief of the fourth Article of military Excellence, makes it impossible to be passed by without dividing it into Sentences.

“ THE most strict Discipline is always “ necessary, but more particularly so in the “ Service you are engaged; wherefore his “ R——l H———s recommends to you, “ that it be constantly observed amongst the “ Troops under your Command, and to be “ particularly careful that they be not thrown “ into a Panic by the Savages, from seizing,
 “ with whom they are yet unacquainted,
 “ and whom the French will certainly employ to frighten them.”

Patience, good Heaven! Was there ever so audacious an Insult on a Great Man, as the attributing such Orders to the supposed august Dictator to whom this is ascribed?

YOU are required to keep your Soldiers to strict Discipline, lest they should be thrown into a Panic: What Connection can there be between the strictest Discipline and warding against a Panic?

YOU are desired to exercise your Soldiers ten Times a Day, to keep off a Panic; you are desired to change the Guard every Hour, to keep off a Panic; you are desired to make them move their Legs altogether, to keep off a Panic; you are desired to see that their Shoes are well blacked, and their Hair powdered, to keep off a Panic; you are desired to make them dine exactly at Twelve, to keep off a Panic.

SUPPOSING all these Orders, and many more, were strictly observed; that the Soldiers were all in Bed as regularly as their Arms are grounded, at the beating the Tattoo, and up again, in the same Manner, at the Reveiller; what would that signify to the preserving them from a Panic? Exercise and Discipline being only corporeal Occupations, must be very imperfect Preservatives against the Apprehension of Objects which affect affect the Mind with Fear; as effectual, perhaps, as bidding little Rory make Cross-Windows on his Bread and Butter, to keep him from being affraid of Apparitions in the Dark; or bore Holes in the Bottoms of his Shoes to cure him of Cowardice.

WOULD any of these Commands have acquainted the Soldiers with the Nature of their Enemy: Was it want of Discipline that gave the Panic at Preston-Pans, Falkirk, and Port l'Orient.

THE being familiarized with the Objects against which Men are to engage, can only prevent a Panic; wherefore, the supposed great Dictator would certainly, on such an Occasion, have ordered the General whom he could chuse, to make Interest and Friendship with the Indians, that the Sight of them might be common in the Eyes of his Troops; he would have commanded advanced Parties of those and the English Soldiers to be sent into the Woods together, that by little Skirmishes they might have been habituated to such Rencounters without Dread; and, by firing Signals to each other from the most distantly advanced, those more near the Army,

Army, might have alarmed the main Body with the approaching Enemy, recovered their Minds from the first Influence which sudden Attacks are apt to make, and prevented all Apprehension of a Panic, by being prepared for the Enemy's Approach, and for meeting them without Intimidation.

THIS, or much better Advice, the supposed R——l Dictator would have given, and not ordered Men to black their Shoes and powder their Hair to prevent a Panic; like the Doctor who advised shaving the Head to prevent Corns on the Toes, or drinking Balm Tea to cure a broken Leg.

THE Term of Seizing, I suppose, is intended as a Sarcasm on those Englishmen who shamefully ran away in America, whose Ancestors used to seize and worry you like Bull-Dogs, ye French Rascals; but ye shall find that the Spirit of seizing a Frenchman is not yet lost in this Country, whenever the Inhabitants, permitted to have Arms, are commanded by him whom you affect to slander. Do not the Circumstances of this Sentence prove, that this Letter was formed after the Defeat of B——k? Can it be conceived that the august Person to whom it is ascribed, who has beheld the brave Actions of our Troops at Fontenoy, could à priori have imagined, that a British Regular would have been intimidated by a wild Indian or Canadian Frenchman.

THE next Sentence is no less remarkable.

“ His R———l H———s recommends “ to you the visiting your Posts Night and “ Day ; that your Colonels and other Officers
 “ be careful to do it, and that you yourself “ frequently set them the Example, and give “ all your Troops plainly to understand, that “ no Excuse will be admitted for any Sur-
 “ prize whatsoever.”

By the first Part of this Sentence the Reader must naturally believe, that the General was two distinct Persons, being first admonished never to sleep Night or Day, and the Colonels ordered to do the same ; and, secondly, that you yourself set them the Example.

WHO was the first you, to whom the visiting the Troops, Night and Day, was recommended ?

commended? It cannot be the General; because it would be ridiculous, after the Colonels and other Officers are ordered to do the same, that you yourself again be commanded to set them the Example, when you must have done it before, in Obedience to the first Command: Who this you and you yourself are, is therefore as difficult to reconcile, as whether Prince Prettyman be, or be not, a Fisherman's Son, as it is, in the Rehearsal, acted by that celebrated Comedian Master Garrick.

BESIDES the Ridicule in this Order, no great General could have given such Commands to an Officer who had ever seen a Camp, because it is the inseparable Condition of being a Soldier; it is designed therefore as a Reflection on the Inattention of Mr Bradish, in suffering himself to be surprized by the Indians.

THE last Article, of giving all the Troops plainly to understand that no Excuse will be admitted for any Surprize whatsoever, is yet a more heinous Insolence in the French Ministry, than any of the preceding, and conveys veys an Idea yet more cruel than the former is ridiculous.

WOULD a P——e, whose Mercy was so conspicuously manifested during the last unnatural Rebellion in Scotland, have given such Orders? He whose constant Charge it was to all his Army, to spare the Innocent; Spare the Innocent, he cried, Women and Children cannot have offended or rebelled, let not the Punishment of the Guilty touch the Guiltless; most of the common Men err through Blindness, or are misled by Prejudice, let them be spared also; Mercy and Conquest shall always be Companions wherever my Arms prevail; my Ambition is to reconcile the most obstinate Subjects to the Clemency of the present Reign. In Obedience to these Orders it is imagined that so few Women and Children were stopped into their Hovels and burnt, and that Lock—t and Sc——t, contrary to their Natures, were rendered so benign and milky-hearted after the Defeat.

CAN then the Leopard change his Spots, or the Æthiopian his Skin; or can those humane Lips, who pronounced the Words of Pity against those indign Rebels to the Crown, have lost their Nature, and uttered, that no Excuse shall save the British and loyal Soldiers from a Fault which cannot be imputed to them?

F

Pity

Is it not the peculiar Province of the Officers to provide advanced Parties and Scouts to prevent Surprize; and shall the common Soldier be punished for his Officer's Neglect of Duty? How shall they perceive the Approach of an Enemy, which the General neglects to discover; or, instantaneously prepared on all Sides, turn to oppose an Enemy which suddenly invades them.

THIS Sentence then was evidently introduced to create an Apprehension in the Soldiers, of Cruelty in the Bosom of him whose whole Life has been equally one continued Act of Mercy, though such genuine Occasions of proving it in England, have not yet been afforded him as in Scotland.

THIS Paragraph then, if ever any thing was, is more than impossible to have proceeded from the Lips of this supposed august Dictator, being a miserable Compound of Folly

Folly and Cruelty, and absolutely contradictory to the second and fourth Articles of military Excellence.

LET me proceed to analyze the remaining Paragraphs, the next of which is not a little singular, extraordinary, and impossible to be given by him to whom it is ascribed.

IT begins, " Should the Ohio Expedition
 " continue any considerable Time, and
 " P——l's and S——ly's Regiments be " found enough to undertake, in the mean
 " while, the Reduction of Niagara, his
 " R——l H———s would have you
 " consider whether you could go there in " Person, leaving the Command of the " Troops on the Ohio to some Officer on " whom you might depend, unless you " should think it better for the Service, to " send those Troops under some Person
 " whom you have designed to command on " the Ohio; but this is a nice Affair, and
 " claims your particular Attention."

VERY sarcastical indeed, Monsieur; you have written this Paragraph long since you have known that the Ohio Expedition was finished in an Hour, and that no Officer under Mr B——k was thought fit to be intrusted with the Command in Chief. Very sneering, indeed, you call that a nice Affair to determine, whether a Man shall resolve to attack du Quesne, which cannot affect Niagara; or Niagara, which must cause the Surrender of du Quesne, reducing B——k, and even his supposed R——l Recommender, to a more despicable Situation than the Ass between two Bundles of Hay, which was suspended by the Equality of the Objects; whereas you have insinuated those Generals to be held in Suspence by unequal Objects, the next Paragraph declaring Niagara of the greatest Consequence.

THIS ungentleman-like Insinuation, seems designed to invalidate the Force of the second military Excellence also. Believe me, it is in vain; your Army may as well take Gibraltar, by throwing Eggs at it, as diminish the Fame of him against whom this whole Malice is intended.

Now follows another Paragraph of Orders, equally malicious and impossible.

“ If

“ IF after the Ohio Expedition is ended, “ it shall be necessary for you to go with your “ whole Force to Niagara, it is the Opinion
 “ of his R——l H———s, that you “ should carefully endeavour to find out a “ shorter Way from the Ohio thither, than “ that of the Lakes, which however ye are “ not to attempt under any Pretence whatso“ ever, without a moral Certainty of being “ supplied with Provision, &c. As to your “ Design of making yourself Master of Nia- “ gara, which is of the greatest Consequence,
 “ his R——l H———s recommends it “ to you, to leave nothing to Chance in the “ Prosecution of that Enterprize.”

THIS Order of finding a shorter Way by Land than through the Lakes, is another severe Sneer upon the cutting down whole Forests to make a Road to du Quesne, where the English Army never ought to have gone; but as that Command has been already proved impossible to proceed from the supposed great Dictator's Mouth, so must this for the same Reason; besides which, the directing B——k to find a shorter Way than through the Lakes, is the grossest Affront that ever was offered to so august a Person. Can the R——l General have imagined, that there is a shorter Way than a strait Line between two Points? Or would he have given such Orders, without observing, that a Line drawn between du Quesne and Niagara, must pass through almost a hundred Miles in length of the Lake Erie?

A COMMAND the like of this, is just saying, Go the farthest Way about, spend me two or three Months in cutting Roads for a hundred Miles through Forests, otherwise impassable, harass your Men and Horses to death with needless Fatigue, lose your Artillery in the Road, lay yourselves open to momentary Ambuscade, Sicknes, and Death, notwithstanding you can pass the whole Way by Water in a few Days without Labour or Danger, carrying all the Ammunition, Baggage, and Provision, with the greatest Care to the whole Army. This was contrived to destroy the Belief of the fourth Article of military Excellence.

As to the attempting the Passage by Land or Water, without a moral Certainty of Provision, it is morally certain equally ridiculous; yet at the same time a tenth Part of the Provision, vision, which is ten times as easily provided, will be sufficient by Water, which is necessary by Land; because the Journey will not take up a tenth Part of the Time.

THE last Sentence is, however, eminently beyond all the former, it is only to be paralleled by itself, as has been already most happily expressed and remarked, by former Writers on former Occasions.

“ You are to leave nothing to Chance in “ prosecuting the Siege of Niagara,”

THIS, indeed, would have been most excellent Advice, if, like Harlequin's dead Horse, it had not one small Fault attending it, that of never being capable to be of Use. For Example, by what kind of Sagacity, though the Admonition was ever so well recommended, could Mr B——k have guarded against the Chance of being killed by a Shot from the Fortification, if he went to the Siege; the Chance of being beaten by a superior Number of the Enemy, the Chance of being out-generalled by the antagonist Commander, the Chance of Sicknefs and Death of him and his Troops, the Chance of Interception of Provision, sion, and raising the Siege through Want of Supplies, and the Chance of a thousand other Accidents? When such Orders are given without telling how they may be put into Execution, What is it but commanding Impossibilities? And whoever had received this Command, to leave nothing to Chance in attacking Niagara, ought to have considered it as an absolute Prohibition from attempting it at all, the only Method by which all Chance of Mis-carriage could have been avoided.

WOULD then the supposed august Dictator have given such absurd Directions? who, notwithstanding his superior Prowess and military Knowledge, has proved at Fontenoy and Laval, that he may chance to be beaten? Who can give Credit to such perfidious Forgeries? But the time of Account is approaching, you French Dogs! when Mr Ar——r's Friends shall lay you ten to one, if you love Chances, that ye shall chance to be beaten. But let me proceed.

THE next Paragraph very well merits your peculiar Attention.

“ WITH

“ WITH regard to the reducing of Crown- “ Point, the provincial Troops being best “ acquainted with the Country will be of the “ most Service ; after the taking of this Fort, “ his R——l H———s advises you to “ consult with the Gov——rs of the neigh“ bouring Provinces, where it will be most “ proper to build a Fort to cover the Fron“ tiers of those Provinces ; as to the Forts “ which you think ought to be built (and of “ which they are too fond in that Country)
 “ his R——l H———s recommends the
 “ the building of them in such Manner, that “ they may not require a strong Garrison ; he “ is of Opinion that you ought not to build “ considerable Forts cased with Stone, ’till “ the Plans and Estimates thereof have been “ approved by the Government. Here his “ R——l H———s thinks that stockad“ ed Forts with Pallisades and a good Ditch, “ capable of containing Two Hundred Men,
 “ or Four Hundred upon an Emergency,
 “ will be sufficient for the present.”

THE first Sentence of the above Paragraph places it beyond all Controversy, that the whole Letter is a French Forgery, designed

to

to overthrow the Credit of the sixth Article of military Excellence, in the falsely supposed great Dictator, and written since the last Campaign in America.

WE all remember, that Mr Johnson with the provincial Militia under his Command marched against Crown-Point; we know also, that this Fortrefs is by much the strongest of all those which were designed to be attacked; this Article of false Admonition then, was framed to ridicule the disposing of the Army, where regular Troops were marched through almost unpassable Forests, to attack a little Fortification, which must have fallen of itself had Niagara been taken; and the Militia, whose Duty must soon call them back to their own private Affairs, under no military Law, the Bravery of which was well adapted to the Manners of fighting in that Country, where Habit makes them skilled and daring, and Victory soon frees them from the Fatigue of War, were ordered to the besieging Crown-Point.

BUT for the sustaining the Hardships of a Siege, where long Perseverance is absolutely necessary, and the Duty and Fatigue require something something more than pure Inclination, Compulsion even to the Work, that the Militia should be deemed fittest for such Undertakings by the supposed great Dictator, and therefore advised by him, is as incredible as that he ordered Mr B——k and the British Troops to dance upon the Wire, kick Straws, and play at Cups and Balls, for creating Friendships amongst the Sachems of the Mohawks, and Onondagan Nations.

Is it possible a P——e so consummately skilled in all military Knowledge, could have so absolutely inverted all the established Rules of martial Conduct, by ordering the Regulars through Woods to engage in a Manner to which they were Strangers and unfit; keeping them from their legitimate Duty, sending at the same time Militia to besiege a Fortress, for which they are as improper as Ram-Cats to draw my Lord-Mayor's Coach?

THE second Sentence is an apt Companion to the former, relating to the building Forts after taking those of the French. This is a Laugh on S——ly's expensive and parading March to the Lakes of Erie and Ontario, and building useless Forts without attacking the French; as if when the Forts of Crown-Point and Niagara were taken, there could be any Occasion for building new ones on the Frontiers.

THE Forts which, whilst in their Hands, are best adapted to preserve their Country from the Inroads of the English; will, when in ours, be equally proper to prevent Incursions from them, as Straßbourg in the German Possession would oppose the French Invasions of Germany, equally as well as it does in the Hands of France, the German Invasions of France.

THE Fondness of Americans for Forts also, is a caustic Sneer on the Neglect which the Governors of our Provinces have all along paid to that necessary Object; an Inattention fatal to English America, because, without such Places, it is impossible the British Subjects can become considerable among the Indians: First, these Forts serve to annoy all with whom we are hostilely concerned, whether French or Indian; then to encourage the Natives with whom we are in Friendship, by affording them strong Holds for the Security of their old Men, Women, and Children, against against their Enemies, whilst their Husbands, Brothers, Sons, and Relations, fight our Battles; for it seems Duty and Love are not yet quite worn out by our mixing amongst them.

IN Obedience to this Way of Thinking, the French have built Forts in very various Parts of that vast Continent, beyond the great Lake Michigan; to which Conduct it is in a great Measure owing, that they are hourly gaining Ground in the Affections of the Natives, and the English losing it.

WOULD the P——e to whom these Orders are ascribed, whose political Knowledge is equal to his military, have given such Precautions about building Fortifications? Would he have advised the erecting such Forts, which, being small and far from Relief, must have fallen the unassisted Prey of the French, whenever they pleased to attack them?

WOULD not such Proceedings have told the Indian Nations, that the English want either Conduct or Courage to defend their Possessions; which Thought, in Indian Heads, must naturally influence their Alliances, ances, and incline them to unite with a People, where the Phænomena of Good Sense are more conspicuously perceived.

IN like Manner, is not the Recommendation of sending home Plans, and not casing the Forts with Stone, a most severe Satire on the Governors of American Provinces, who have constantly put the Money in their Pockets which has been nationally designed for the Purpose of building Fortifications, and comes with double Acrimony when it falls from the Lips of our perfidious Adversaries, who triumphantly behold the Roguery of our Governors, Disgrace of the Nation, and Ruin of our Plantations!

THIS Passage, indeed, being so much a-kin to that delicate Satire which was so remarkable in the supposed Dictator, when a Child, and Lord C—ft—d frequented the Court, I could easily believe might be his, but that all the other Parts of the Letter absolutely contradict it.

THIS Wit then must be placed to the French Account, as well as the Malice which is so closely linked with it.

THERE is nothing which tends to render Men more ridiculous, than giving the most trite Admonitions, under an important Air of Consequence and Discovery; particularly if it be accompanied with a deep Pretension of foreseeing what no Man ever missed seeing that had Eyes. This malicious Design, I must own against my Will, the French Ministers have hit off with some Success in the ensuing Paragraph.

“ As Lieutenant-C——l L——e, who “ commands in Nova S——a, hath long “ projected the taking Beaufejour; his “ R——l H———s advises you to con“ sult with him, both with Regard to the “ Time and the Manner of executing that “ Design.”

A VERY sensible and shrewd Admonition, upon my Word, Monsieur; as if the supposed great Dictator imagined any General would set about interfering in another General's Province, without first consulting him upon that Head.

BUT

BUT now comes the great Command, and equal Proof of his Forefight and intuitive Perception.

“ IN this Enterprize his R——l H———fs “ foresees, that His M——y’s Ships may be “ of great Service, as well by transporting “ the Troops and warlike Implements, as “ intercepting the Stores and Succours that “ might be sent to the French, either by the “ Baye Françoisse, or from Cape Breton by “ the Baye Verte.”

HE foresees that Ships are of Use in transporting Troops and intercepting Succours: Does he, ye French Rascals! And so he does that the Sun will rise to-morrow: And who does not? How could you have the Impudence to put such a subtle Parade of Forefight into his Mouth, and thus audaciously attempt to depreciate his military Reputation, by imputing to him this Air of important Folly. Believe me, his superior Excellence shall still keep the same Ascendant, which it has hitherto preserved, over your Belleisles, Contis, Richelieus, and Soubises, though fifty Minorcas

Minorcas should be taken from us, and fifty Invasions threatened on this Island.

THIS Forefight is not inferior in Excellence to the great Discovery of Sir Hans Sloane, in his History of Jamaica, where he assures us, that Sheep, which are brought from the Continent to that Island, are brought in a Ship. Do you, by this Artifice, Villians, mean to insinuate, that the R——l Ge——l, like the Doctor in Physic, is no more than an old Woman? It shall not succeed, mon Ami, it will never be believed; your meagre Troops shall sorely feel the contrary.

WE are now happily arrived to the last Paragraph, which is no less replete than the former, with Proofs that this Letter has been forged since the last American Campaign.

“ With regard to your Winter Quarters, “ after the Operations of the Campaign are “ finished, his R——l H———s re“ commends it to you to examine, whether “ the French will not endeavour to make “ some Attempts next Season, and in what “ Parts they will most probably make them :
 “ In this Case it will be most proper to H “ canton

“ canton your Troops on that Side, at such “ Distances that they may easily be assembled “ for the common Defence ; but you will be “ determined in this Matter by Appearances,
 “ and the Intelligence which it hath been re“ commended to you to procure, by every “ Method, immediately after your landing.”

THIS Advice, of enquiring whether the French will not endeavour to make some Attempts next Season, meaning this Year, is a heart-felt Satire upon what passed the last, and a most inhuman Triumph over the Neglect which has been paid to the American Dominions, and Numbers of His M——y's Subjects which have, last Winter, been barbarously butchered on the Frontiers, through want of Forts and Forces to protect them, and the Distribution of Troops to be easily called together ; the whole Order is founded upon an imagined Success in all the Operations of the preceding Campaign ; whereas, every Thing having miscarried, and in Consequence of the Absurdity of the foregoing Orders, as the French Ministers would artfully insinuate by the Forgery of this Letter, the Blame of all this ill Success they imagined must then fall upon the supposed august

august Dictator, as sinister Directions produce sinister Events, and those who are obliged to follow them, are but little culpable in Comparison of those who give them.

THE Contrivers of this atrocious Lye, pardon that harsh Expression from a Heart filled with Resentment, knew full well that B——k was dead, and Defamation could not hurt him nor serve them; but they knew the supposed august Dictator, for whom they have forged these Directions, was yet alive; him they intend to injure. The Glory of the British and Terror of the Gallican Arms, whom may Heaven, in Compassion to our otherwise weak Condition, and for the Sake of his Nephew, long continue in Health to command our Armies, not forgetting to pray for the Continuation of the Blessing of the Life of his august and illustrious Sire, who, in Commiseration to our Distress, in the want of military Knowledge in the Generals of the English Troops, has kindly prevailed upon his steady Ally the E——r of H——r, to lend us a General, firmly attached to the Protestant Interest; who, if the supposed august Dictator, though immortal in Fame, should succumb under Disease or Death, is the next in Command, in Preference of all the English Commanders. Thus fortified by his paternal Care, what Harm can Man do unto us?

BUT I ask Pardon for this Digression, proceeding from a grateful, loyal Heart, and return to tracing out the Remains of French Roguery in this Letter.

THE Direction of judging by Appearances, and Recommendation of getting Intelligence of the Enemies Designs, is a further Instance of attempting to lessen the Idea of consummate Knowledge in a great General, by giving mock important Commands and frivolous Directions. Then follows a Demonstration of these Admonitions being framed upon Circumstances which occurred after the Battle near Fort du Quesne: “ It is unnecessary to “ put you in Mind, how careful you must be “ to prevent being surprized.”

VERY unnecessary, indeed, to a Man who was capable of following no Directions, and very silly in a Director, without telling him which Way it ought to be done. It puts me in Mind of my old Grandmother, who when

I was young, and first began to ride on Horseback; Sandy, says she ten times, be sure you do not fall from your Horse; but never instructed me how to ride with Security, or how to be a good Horseman; by which Means I fell as often as if the good old Woman had never given me her Advice at all.

CAN then the celebrated Dictator, to whom this Letter is falsely ascribed, give Orders like an old Wife, ye French Rascals? It is not possible; ye have forged this Repetition of Advice against Surprise, upon the glaring Circumstance of Mr B——k's being surprized in the Action of his Defeat.

THE mentioning Winter Quarters, the Apprehension of the Difficulty of subsisting the Troops, and giving the chief Attention to that only, seems a Satire designed to reflect on putting the Army into Winter Quarters in the middle of August, to prevent all Danger of suffering by Want, in a Country which abounds with Provision, when the Operations might have been continued two Months longer. Would ye impute this Order, also, to the great General, whom ye have forged

as the Author of this Letter, when it is impossible his Genius could have suggested, that any Officer could conceive such an absurd Design, or know of it, 'till, perhaps, Months after the Thing was put in Execution? This single Circumstance proves the whole an egregious Falshood, and utterly impossible to have escaped his Lips; as if the chief Care of a great Commander, was only that his Troops should have full Bellies and look fat, in preference to conquering their Enemies and serving their Country.

YE Soup-meagre Rascals! ye Sallad-eating Thieves! ye Pharoah's Lean-kine! I see this Sarcasm, contained in this Sentence, against the Plumb-Pudding and Roast-Beef of Old England; Sirrahs! we can fight as well as eat. This proceeds only from pure Envy of our eating, from the happy and thriving State in which we are at present, and the Chagrin of the declining starving Condition, which ye feel hanging over ye; Hogarth has already, and shall again, take ample Vengeance on ye for this Affront.

THE next Sentence, which crowns the whole, I find ye have imagined too extraordinary to be put into the Mouth of that august gust Person, for whom ye have forged the preceding Orders. And therefore ye have made the Writer in his own Person say, “ I hope that the extraordinary Supply put on “ board the Fleet, and the thousand Barrels “ of Beef destined to your Use, will facilitate

 “ and secure the supplying of the Troops
 “ with Provision, &c.”

THIS Hope I shall venture to pronounce is as well grounded a Hope as ever Christian entertained : What can be a more reasonable Hope, than that extraordinary Supplies, and a thousand Barrels of Beef, will facilitate and secure the supplying of the Troops with Provision? Insinuating, I suppose, that our M——rs were more careful of sending Beef, than good Officers to America ; designing also, that as the first Paragraph began with a Bull, that the last shall terminate with a Hope, where it is scarce possible for a Hope to enter, and is not much better than Nonsense.

Do ye imagine then, that this Gentleman was capable of hoping that so much Beef and Provision would be a Supply, when he knew it was a Demonstration that it must be so? Sirrahs! we Englishmen eat Beef and Pudding ding too, in great Quantities, and glory in it; and so would you also, if you could, ye Starvelings! But our Officers know that Hope expresses some Possibility of the Objects mis-carrying, which is hoped for; we don't hope for that which we are sure we possess, or hope that Men will be supplied with the Beef and Provisions, which we are convinced they carry along with them. But we hope to see all you Rascals well drubbed by Land and Sea, paying ample Atonement for the unparalleled Insolence of forging this Letter, and ascribing it to the supposed R——l Dictator.

HAVING thus, by Syllogism, Arguments à priori and à posteriori, proved the Impossibility of this Letter being authentick, I now ask Pardon for some few indecent Escapes of warm Expressions against our Enemies the French, even Enemies, in my humble Opinion, requiring a humane Treatment; but as the Nature of the Subject was in itself so interesting to every Briton, it was impossible for me not to burn with Anger against that (I cannot contain myself) perfidious Nation, which thus artfully attempted to sap every Article of military Excellence in the falsely supposed Dictator of that Letter to Mr B——k.

As

As it is impossible, therefore, to foresee how far the Orders in that Paper may gain the Credit of being genuine among the Great, and little Vulgar of B——n, and even amongst the People of other Nations, where the French have, with the greatest Assiduity, spread their Memorials; I have, therefore, thought it my Duty to analyze every Particular of it, however unequal I may be to the undertaking such a Subject, and demonstrate that a Phænomenon the like of that, could never fall from the Lips of him to whom it is thus falsely ascribed; and that the whole is an Artifice of the French to lessen the Opinion of the World, which is at present so greatly in his Favour.

ALL the Pain I find upon this Occasion is, the not being able to write the French Language as it ought to be; by which Means this Analysis will be impeded from spreading wherever the French Memorials have gone before, and pulling up the Mischief which has taken Root, from the Diligence of the French sowing that pernicious Seed of Calumny.

IN consequence of this, I shall request some one honest French Refugee of those, who in all their Conversations are so strictly attach'd to the Honour of England, and so violent against their own Countrymen, particularly on the late Occasions of La Gallissoniere and Marshal Richlieu, to translate these Reasons, which are humbly offered to the Consideration of all Europe, as an authentic Proof of that Letter to Mr B——k being all a French Forgery; and to obviate all the Malignancy which it contains, by endeavouring to convey an Idea, that no great General could be the Dictator of such an Epistle.

THE Design of this Forgery in our perfidious Enemies (I must say it) was, I presume, to destroy our almost only Hope of Success, being convinced that the M——r in Chief, and in the Marine, were not a little sunk in the People's Opinion and Esteem; they therefore rashly concluded, that by insinuating the Idea of the Head of the A——y being also unequal to the great Command, that a general Despondency might seize the whole Nation, if, peradventure, they should give Credit to a Belief of this Letter being being written by the Person to whom it is falsly ascribed.

I As too many Persons, Enemies to the supposed great Dictator, have, with too much seeming Pleasure, descanted on this Letter as a Piece of Demonstration that the Author of it could not be equal to the Command of a G——l in Chief, I thought it a Duty incumbent on me to attempt proving the whole an insidious French Forgery; that either the Clamours and Maledictions of the Discontented might be stopp'd; or, if that should not prove possible to be effectuated, that reflecting on the Importance of the Duty, and the Danger of a Defeat by a French Invasion, that His M——y in Person, or by his great H——-n General, might assist to animate and command the People to the taking Vengeance on the Enemies of Britain; wherefore, in every Sense as a B——n, I thought it my Duty to lay open and expose the malignant Tendency of the French, in ascribing that Letter to the falsly supposed R——l Dictator: That all Panic may be prevented from spreading amongst the Troops on any sudden Invasion from the French, re-animating the Soldiers who, too many of them, have

have been too much inclined to believe those Orders authentic, or warning His M——y's Ministers of the Effects which such a Belief may create on the Day of Battle; not that I believe the supposed R——l Dictator can ever succumb under this artful Malice of his Adversaries, but to place the Honour of the Crown, and Good of the People, in the utmost Security, against an Enemy actuated by the Sense of Honour for that King whose Battles they fight, and by Resentment against us who are their Enemies.

HOPING therefore to receive the Thanks of all honest Men at this important Crisis, particularly of the R——l F——y, and his R——l H———s the P——e of —, whose Interest it is, as well as that of this People, that neither malignant Lyes be spread against the supposed R——l Dictator, nor the least evitable Risque be incurred, that may cause this Kingdom to succumb under a French Invasion; I hope that the Advice which was given in the great Latin Poet to Julus, the Founder of the Julian Name in Rome, may be acceptable at present to the promised Supporter of this Land.

HAVING thus, from an honest Heart, and without Guile, cleared my Mind of that Heaviness which hung upon it, through Fear of those ill Effects which a more general Belief of that Letter being genuine and authentic might create, I take my Leave, wishing all possible Success to the Armies of the R——l Fa——ly, and this Nation, still ready, to defend them by Ink as the Troops are by Arms, from all the Attacks of our insidious Enemies the French.
